Moreover, I think that a first clue for proceeding in this matter can be found in the pseudonym that Kierkegaard uses in narrating his version of the story of Abraham: Johannes de Silentio. Welcome. This is where he comes from the desire, at ten years old, to become "Priest and teacher". Seems to me that the answer is a combination of the above, and the fact that it's now an unusual phrasing giving rise to "death do we part" as a hypercorrection; putting a nominative pronoun in front of the verb instead of an objective without paying attention to what had been said or what was now said.
